For Rose.

Without her patience, support, and honest feedback, this book would have remained just a neat idea.

Terry

For My Father.

Who gave me hope and helped me to become who I am today.

Tony

Let me tell you a story
you may think is not true.
I might not believe it
if I heard it from you!

I was in a strange room
that to you might look plain.
When from out of the fireplace popped the head of a train!

It looked like a model.
Smoke poured out of its stack.
It could hang in the air
with no need for a track.

I'm not sure how I got there.
I could not find a door.
I looked on the ceiling,
the walls, and the floor.
So I grinned at the train and asked, "How do you do?"
I told him, "My name is KAL E. KALZOO."

I could tell right away
this was not a nice place.
The train scowled and huffed;
then blew smoke in my face!

The clock on the mantle
I wanted to leave now,
but how was not clear.

It's Kal E Kalzoo in a very strange place.
Where a train flies around and blows smoke in his face!
Do you know how he got there? Do you have any clue?
Do you think getting home is a thing he can do?

I know you have questions you'd like answered now.
Like "How does it end? Can you please tell me how?"
I can tell you the clock is much more than he seems
And a rock star might sing the song of your dreams.
